NO DRAFT DATE YET; DRAW MILLION FIRST

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Washington, July 6.—Secretary
Baker and Provost Marshall Crowder today were completing final details of the method to be employed in selecting registrants for the new national army. The date of the drawing has not been set.
There will be exemptions among the drafted before the first increment of 625,000 men can actually be assembled, necessarily more than that number of names will be drafted on first operation. It is probable that as many as a million or two million names might be drawn and from them the first increment of 625,000 men will be formed. Other troops will be drawn from the remainder until it is decided to form another increment.

From Madison.
By Saturday night
duplicate copies of the registration cards under the draft law will either be on file with Adjutant General's office or in the mail destined for Adjutant General's office. There was a bulletin that over fifty per cent of the registered district of the state had already registered duplicate registration cards to the office.

U. S. INTERCEPTS LETTERS FOR SPY

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

New York, July 6.—Federal authorities investigating suspected methods of communication between the United States and Germany, announced that the seizure of a bundle of letters, including communications which arrived from the central powers, apparently intended to reach Alexander Von Neuber, formerly Austrian council general in New York. Von Neu-ber left here after the government investigation charged that he shipped reservists to Austria under fraudulent passports in 1915.

Some of the letters now confiscated were to reach Von Neuber has not been disclosed nor were his present whereabouts announced. The letters were brought here by sailors on a Sardinian vessel and delivered in Hoboken. The plan, according to the investigators, was for the mail to be re-addressed here so that it would appear to be coming from the United States. The sailors admitted they were paid to smuggle the mail past the British censor and promised to testify for the government if needed.
Some of the letters were addressed to persons in India, China, and other foreign countries.

FAIL TO FIX BLAME FOR WHALEBACK LOSS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Milwaukee, July 6.—Examination of officers of the steamer Christopher Columbus on which sixteen persons were killed July 1, showed that the struck the supports of a water tank on a dock of the Milwaukee river, was productive of no additional information at the coroner's inquest this morning, tending to fix the responsibility.

The executive officers of the vessel had been examined when rescue was ordered, but had not been called before, struck the Christopher Columbus during maneuvers it had executed for thirteen years, and drove the protruding bow of their vessel into the stanchions supporting the tank.

The inquest was to be resumed late this afternoon, with the examination of witnesses.
The vessel was owned by the Temple and Welcome, which assembled in guiding the Christopher Columbus out of the river on her return trip to Chicago.

rine in Hampton Roads caused the sighted an object which he believed to be a periscope within Hampton Roads.

SOMEBODY ATTEMPTED "TO SLIP ONE OVER"

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Madison, July 6.—Abraham Lincoln's birthday came near being a legal holiday in Wisconsin. A correction measure in the form of a revision of the statute bill, passed by the legislature over a week ago, was found to contain an amendment which makes Lincoln's birthday a holiday. As the revision bills are not intended to contain any new matter, but only a re-classification of the subject matter, Governor Philipp refused to sign the bill. It was changed to read that the old law by a correlative measure.
The bill to make Lincoln's birthday a half holiday, was defeated at this session.

STRIKING MINERS QUIET IN ARIZONA

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Bowie, Ariz., July 6.—A telephone message from the sheriff's office at Globe, where operations in the mines have been tied up since Saturday by a strike of miners, said the city was quiet today. Troops of cavalry have been patrolling the streets. Office employees and strike breakers continue to operate the pumps at the Old Domestic mine and strike to maintain who are picketing the mines, permitting sufficient food to pass to the men manning the pumps. Failure to operate the pumps, it was said, would result in flooding the mines and perhaps ruin the property.

REICHSTAG LIFTS BAN ON NEWSPAPER

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Copenhagen, July 6.—In consequence of the vigorous representation in the reichstag by the main committee, the preventive censorship imposed a few days ago on the Frankfurter Zeitung has been raised. The measure was the result of a financial article by Professor Webber of Heidelburg on the financial and exchange situation.

TRANSPORTS AND DESTROYERS FLYING OLD GLORY REACH FRANCE

The honor of taking the first contingent of American fighting men to France fell to the transport Neptune, which is here shown anchored in a French harbor, with American destroyers, which conveyed her, at her side. This transport has been followed by many more, each laden with American troops and their provisions and munitions of war. Thus far the transports and their convoys have not suffered a single scratch from the waiting German submarines.

Saxon Diet Breaks With Germany as Discontent Grows

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Copenhagen, July 6.—A dispatch from Dresden says the Saxon diet, which Tuesday warned the government of the disappearance of sentiment of loyalty to the king and of a coming upheaval unless the government mends its ways, has now broken openly with the government.

The diet refused to give the necessary authorization to settle the fuel problem and it must therefore be re-convoked not later than August. This will enable the constitutional committee to resume work.

SWEDEN IN GRAVE STRAITS ALARMED BY U. S. DECISION

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Stockholm, July 6.—Washington dispatches of the last few days forecasting the sharpest limitation or possible discontinuance of all exports to neutrals, caused anxiety in production circles and among the people generally. The situation is already grave and the prospect pictured by news from America renders it still more disquieting.

Crops are likely to be below the average. Manufactures of various lines are closed by lack of raw material. Others cannot maintain production much longer. Benzine and petroleum are nearly exhausted. Leather is scarce and so dear that a pair of ordinary shoes cost from $10 to $12.
Automobile tires bring $300 apiece.

The stock of coffee in the kingdom will be exhausted in a month. Long lines of people standing outside the stores waiting to buy coffee may already be seen.

The government already has taken measures to deal with extensive unemployment which is considered inevitable if the war lasts another winter, and if it becomes impossible to import needed commodities.

In view of the assertion in some quarters that Sweden's imports are not intended solely for Swedish consumption, the Associated Press asks Herr Bj. Trolle, formerly minister of foreign affairs, and now president of the government war trade commission for a statement.

He said, "Official statistics of Swedish importations for 1916, which are now nearly complete, demonstrate the absolute erroneous-ness of assertions that we bring in American products for the purpose of passing them on to the central powers."

LABOR PROBLEMS IN SPAIN ARE SETTLED

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Madrid, July 6.—At a meeting of the Spanish cabinet, presided over by King Alfonso, as reported in a dispatch Premier Dato outlined the situation in regard to labor problems, most of which are said to have been solved in a satisfactory manner.
Dealing with the diplomatic situation, the premier referred to comments in foreign press which he did not consider just.

Sixty Catalonians and deputies met the government to give administrative autonomy to all provinces. They decided also that if the government did not immediately summon parliament they would themselves call upon members of parliament to meet in Barcelona July 19th. Ninety liberal soldiers and deputies met in Madrid and approved the international policy of Count Romanos, former premier.

Peking, July 6.—The situation in the capital is becoming serious.
Trains are filled with fleeing Chinese going to Tien Tsin. The hotels are full of foreigners. Small American and Japanese forces are endeavoring to come from Tien Tsin, but their arrival may be delayed by the fighting at Langsang, where five thousand of the troops of General Chang Hun are opposing an advance guard of 20,000 republicans.

Position Hopeless.
Tien Tsin, China, July 6.—The position of General Chang Hun, the leader of the royalist movement, apparently is hopeless. It is feared that when this is realized his troops will loot Peking.

Republicans in Force.
London, July 6.—A dispatch from Tien Tsin says the Manchurian restoration seems on the verge of collapse.
Fifty thousand republican troops are converging on Peking, where General Chang Hun has only about 3,000 men.

A dispatch to the Daily Mail says that General Chang Hun, realizing his mistake in attempting to restore the emperor, threatens to sack Peking, burn the Manchurian palace and take the emperor to Mongolia.

DUELLING POPULAR IN ARGENTINE NOW

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Buenos Aires, July 6.—Items like the following, which appeared in the Buenos Aires Herald recently, are seen frequently in the Argentine press:
"In the quinta (dooryard) of Dr.
Delacase, a prominent lawyer, situated in Belgrano (a Buenos Aires suburb) a duel with sabers was fought yesterday between Senores Manuel Rocca and Ezequiel B. Casas before several witnesses. Senor Rocca was slightly wounded in the first assault, when the duel was called off and the antagonists became reconciled upon the field of honor."

For hitting a man with your fist, if blood is drawn, the minimum Argentine penalty is six months' imprisonment without the option of a fine but the police never pay attention to duellists. Argentine duels, too, sometimes result fatally.

after nine o'clock. Labor leaders the mayor, sheriff and representatives of the street car company went into four different cities, a boy, who was lost in 1910, has been found. The boy, Philip Kaminski of Detroit, believed today they have discovered the boy, who was taken from them when they were in the city of Chicago. The boy is believed to have been adopted by a

DRAFT IN CANADA IS PROBABLE

HOUSE OF COMMONS PASSES
BILL FOR COMPULSORY MILI-TARY SERVICE TO SEC-OND READING.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Ottawa, Canada, July 6.—The Canadian house of commons early today, adopted a resolution offered by Premier Borden, passing to second reading the bill for compulsory military service.

The vote on the bill brought about twenty more votes than is usually polled on questions. This was the result of a considerable number of English speaking republicans breaking away from Sir Wilfred Laurier and joining with Premier Borden in support of conscription.

Before the bill was sanctioned, Sir Wilfred Laurier proposed that the question should be left to the opinion of the people, should be tested by referendum, but this proposal was defeated by a majority of 49.

The attendance was the largest that was seen in parliament in many years. The galleries were filled throughout the night. A majority of the spectators were soldiers returned from Europe and women.

A resolution presented by the French nationalists from the province of Quebec that the conscription bill should be killed by six months' postponement, was defeated by the large majority of 166. Only nine nationalist votes were cast for the motion, and both the government and the opposition to conscription voted against this proposal.

An amendment aimed to supply more adequate provision for dependents of men at the front was defeated 115 to 55.

2,500 FROM VARSITY IN WAR ACTIVITIES

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., July 6.—A total of more than 1,500 men, students of the University of Wisconsin, are engaged in war service through the "war service" census and employment bureau conducted by the University of Wisconsin. According to final figures on the project, with almost 1,000 who left the university before the end of the year to take up food production or military work, it means that more than 75 percent of the men students are recorded as engaged in the summer vacation in emergency service.

Of the 1,500 students who found summer jobs through the employment bureau, 44 percent are engaged in farming, 40 percent in industrial work of various kinds and 16 percent in miscellaneous employments.

About 1,600 "war service badges"
have been awarded to men students so far. A large number of students, however, who are entitled to receive badges have not yet applied for them.
Exactly 399 men students who applied for summer work did not secure positions before the deadline for their home counties are now being aided by the county councils of defense throughout the state.

If warm days and modern foot-wear have given you aching, burning, swollen feet, corns, or painful calluses, here is real foot-comfort for you at last.

From the cooling, dewy mint-beds of old Japan come the fresh, soothing ingredients that in just a few weeks have made Ice-Mint, the most popular foot remedy in America.

Rub a little Ice-Mint on any tender corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears, and shortly the corn or callus will loosen so that it can be licked out easily with the fingers.

ICE-MINT

Is a clear, creamy, snow-white, non-poisonous substance and does not inflame or even irritate the most tender skin. There is no pain and not one bit of soreness while applying Ice-Mint, or afterwards. It acts so gently, so magically, that you will never again run the risk of blood-poisoning by cutting a corn.

Hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes, also toughened calluses soon melt and come off under the remarkable influence of Ice-Mint.

No matter what you have tried or how many times you have been disappointed, you are relieved in the cooling, soothing comfort that Ice-Mint brings.

Try It! Ask your druggist today for a small jar of Ice-Mint and learn for yourself what foot-comfort really is. You'll like it immensely.

Third Quarter. Lesson 11. 2 Chronicles XXVIII. 1-5:27. July 6, 1917.
Golden Text: Without faith it is impossible to be well-pleasing unto him. Hebrews XI. 6.

AHAZ, THE FAITHLESS KING.

In any gallery of unworthies Ahaz, king of Judah, would deserve a conspicuous place. He inherited the sins of his fathers, and in the patriarchal, tribal, and acquired right came to the throne in an era of unexampled commercial prosperity.
He had a merchant marine which was not only picturesque, with its purple sails and golden bows, but was busy in both export and import trade. His army, especially in the important places, was in high state of efficiency.
Gold and silver filled the treasury.

What will be the young king's answer to such an opportunity for noble service? He gave it quickly and decisively. He broke with his ancestry. Instead of following their illustrious example he imitated that of the kings of Israel in spite of the fact that the Lord had brought their kingdom to the crumbling edge of ruin. He exchanged the pure and significant ritual of his nation for the hideous, cruel and licentious worship of Baal and Moloch. In his esteem the holy temple was nothing more than a safety-deposit box which he could loot at will to multiply his immortalities or buy an ignoble and precious peace with hostile nations.

With wanton and sacrilegious hands he stripped it of its golden vessels. He was not content to merely close its doors against would-be worshippers, but he set up idol-altars at every street corner of Jerusalem as a substitute for the temple, sacked and sealed.

Quick and sharp were the corrective judgments that fell upon the nation. The Assyrians, the ferocious and unquitting Huns of his day, were at his gates. Now he must faint loose his own palace and the princely houses of his capital adding this to what remained of the temple treasure to buy a respite. In the blind extremity of his delirium he rushed to the idolatrous conclusion that if he would only sacrifice to the gods of Damascus they would help him as they seemed to help other devotees. The historical notation as this point is singularly indicative, "but they were the ruin of him."

Enemies closed in from every quarter.
One is spared the end of the monsterous and grisly story of the "Kings of Judah."

Such a monarch was not considered fit to be beside his royal sire in the Westminster Abbey of Jerusalem. The significant notation is "they brought him not into the sepulchre of the kings."

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.
"God did it"; that is the laconic record when it comes to the punishment of Ahaz. Yes, it is, but through the operation of natural laws which he had himself ordained.
Those irreversible and inviolable laws which grow slowly but exceeding fine.

The lure and peril of our day is sudden and great wealth. If wealth is idolized it will certainly bring swift and condign punishment.
On the other hand, wealth is recognized as an opportunity and investment for service it will open heaven's windows to showers of blessing.

Of course there is a secret history of Ahaz' defection. There was no doubt an old cabal in the court which for selfish ends intrigued for the introduction of idolatry. It had been kept in subjection during the pure and strong reigns which preceded Ahaz' weakness was its opportunity.

In one fell swoop Ahaz forfeited the advantages gained by the painful struggle of the past. The great and solemn destiny of Judah was to usher in the Messiah. The king selfishly and with consummate policy does his best to thwart it. He shuts the temple doors, what was negative. He made idol-altars at every corner. That was positive.

Robbing the altar to placate an enemy is always poor policy. Ahaz took gold from the Lord's house and gave it to the king of Assyria, but he helped him not.

It would have been bad enough if the king had merely permitted or condoned the idolatry of his subjects, but he was personally forward in them. The extraordinary power of his high position was cast in their favor. He burnt his own children. His reasoning powers were so distorted that he imagined he could prolong his own days by shortening those of his sons and daughters.

Like the Russian family chased by the pack of wolves are said to have tossed out a child at a time in hopes of saving some. To find what is "right in the eyes of Jehovah" and to do it, is religion. Ahaz did exactly the opposite.

For a bombastic epitaph commend us to that of a contemporary of Ahaz (Tiglapileser IV.) preserved in the British Museum: "Great, Powerful, King of the four quarters." Every such epitaph if it is stamped, "He did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord."

If you want a definition of syncretism you have it in Ahaz. He attempted to reconcile the incongruous principles and practices of idolatry with Theism.

From our point of view the lapse of Ahaz seems irrational and unpardon-able, but the temptation was really very subtle. Belief in local divinities, springing from the soil and controlling it everywhere prevailed in his day.
Sacrifices to them were deemed imperatively necessary to insure fruit of field and vine.

A boy was on a visit with his mother. In the great chamber the doting parents had framed the artistic efforts of a daughter. The little fellow put his hands behind his back and started on a tour of the gallery. Stopped for some time before the most ambitious canvas of all he quietly remarked, "Mama, I think this is the ugliest of 'em!"

In the kindly gallery of Judah Ahaz is "the ugliest of 'em." Current events are illustrating the subtle ways in which an autocracy may be influenced for weal or woe in the story of the Camarilla just coming to light.
The real rulers of Russia were few and unknown to the public. They could pass laws over the head of the Duma. They were popularly known as the "Dark Rulers." Even the Czar himself feared them. Some such government, if it can be called a government, maintained in Ahaz' day.

July 8, 1917. Hebrews VI, 9-20.
But beloved, we are persuaded be-

ter things of you and things that accompany salvation.

TRIED AND PROVED.

We live in an age of billion dollar fortunes. Bequests and legacies are correspondingly large. But the greatest inheritance the world knows anything of is the inheritance with God. It is the inheritance without a tax. It is the legacy of which no one can be defrauded. It is guaranteed and certified by the oath of God himself. "No word he has spoken was ever yet broken." On the margin of a well-worn bible left by a poor widow the letters "T" and "P" inscribed in many places. The inscription was a mystery to her friends until some one remembered that she had said that she had "tried" all the promises of God and had "proven" them true. She had put her talismanic attestation joyfully over against every divine assurance.
Faithful faith and patience she inherited the promises. Who shall say she was not rich?

Everyday Wisdom
By DON HEROLD

WHAT'S THE MATTER,
LUTHER?

I GOT INTO A THREE SIDED
MIRROR
AGAIN, TODAY

PROFILES
The average man sees his profile about once every three months.
Then it comes as a shock to him.
He carries it around with him continuously and it is accessible to other people, and they use it as a subject of conversation, yet the man himself seldom gets a glimpse of it.

All of us gradually get hardened to the fronts of our faces, but we don't have much opportunity to get reconciled to our profiles.

The profile consists mainly of the nose, but sometimes the chin enters into the picture, or is noticeably absent. There are many men with noses which annoy them very little from the front but which take all the contentment out of life for the men when they accidentally get a profile view of them.

If a person is careful he can avoid his profile at all times except when buying a hat, and there are a few men who dash into a hat store and take the clerk's word about how a hat looks from the side, rather than renew acquaintance with their profiles.

Baldness will lengthen the profile
from two to eight inches.
Whiskers will blur or obliterate the lower half of the profile. It is a great satisfaction to have a profile that is part whiskers, for then it may be molded to taste, with a pair of shears.

LOCAL CONCERN WINS IN FAMOUS DAM CASE

ESTATES OF HAYES BROTHERS AND PETERS AWARDED JUDGMENT IN BELLE-FOURCHE DAM SUIT.

ARE AWARDED $87,359

Case Against National Surety Company Involved Many Technicalities of Contract.

After years of litigation regarding large sums of money and constituting what is probably the longest and most complicated case ever tried in Rock county, Judge George Grimm has handed down a decision in the case of Hayes Brothers and Peters against the National Surety company, granting a judgment of over eighty-seven thousand dollars in payment for work done by the local firm on the Belle Fourche reclamation project in South Dakota.

The history of the case reveals a battle over a myriad of legal and contractual technicalities which has been waged pro and con at intervals since December, 1912. Upwards of fifty separate points were brought up in the defense, and over a hundred typewritten pages. While there were any number of minor points brought up in the defense, perhaps the biggest fight of the suit was over the real meaning of the contract, and the exact obligations imposed upon the parties entering into it. Another factor brought out by the surety company was that the local firm had automatically waived all rights to recover by allowing the matter to run for so long.

The action arose out of the construction of a large irrigation dam at Belle-Fourche, South Dakota. The original contract for the work was let by the government in 1905 to the firm of Orman & Crook of Denver, Colorado, the senior partner of which, Mr. Orman, was at one time governor of Colorado.

This concern began the work and completed a good portion of it, but went into bankruptcy in 1908, leaving some $700,000 worth of work still to be completed. At this point the United States government took possession of the property, together with all machinery, tools, equipment and animals, under the provision of the original contract with Orman & Crook.

The government then called upon the National Surety company, which had been secured by Orman & Crook in compliance with federal regulations as surety on their bonds, to complete the work which they had started in making over to the Colorado contractors' surety bonds.

The National Surety company then entered into a contract with the late Michael and Dennis Hayes, who were the owners of this city to complete the work of construction amounting approximately to $700,000. In due time the local concern completed the work, but in settling the payment a dispute arose as to how much was due them on their contract. The matter was brought into court, but was set aside on a decision in the United States supreme court regarding differences arising between the surety company and the government regarding their contract.

This case was settled about a year ago, and litigation on the local suit was again started, with Jeffris, Mount, Geisfeich Hayes Brothers and Peters, and Miller, Mack & Fairchild of Milwaukee conducting the defense. The trial was completed and the voluminous briefs filed only this morning. The question taken under advisement by the court, in the persons of Judge George Grimm. His decision, in which the findings alone filled eight pages, was handed down yesterday, awarding judgment to the plaintiff against the National Surety company amounting to $87,359.17, representing the amount due together with interest which had accrued since negotiations were started, besides the costs involved.

From the popular standpoint the case had offered little of interest, in that litigation was largely over technical details and contractual obligations, but in that the suit involved such prominent concerns and no large amount, it has been followed with more or less interest by Janesville people.

BATTLE HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC

Julia Ward Howe wrote the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" in a moment of intense inspiration. It was while she was on a visit to Washington in 1862. She was impressed by the troops guarding the city. One night she awoke from her slumber to find herself weaving together the lines of a poem. She arose and so this "Battle Hymn of the Republic" inspires Americans as few others do. The tune is that of "John Brown's Body."

This song in company with many others of our country's well known and historic songs is included in the book entitled "Songs of Our Country" which with the historic flag book entitled "Your Flag and Mine" are free to Gazette subscribers who pay in advance.

Germans Lie in "The Officials," So Do British, Its Human Nature

(By Lowell Mellett.)
(Special to the Gazette.)

London, July 5.—(Maj.-Gen. Maurice, director of military operations for the British army, a few days ago answered the question that has been bothering American correspondents for many months. The question was: "Who's lying now?"

His answer, given emphatically, was: "The Germans."

However, it wasn't all as simple as that. The correspondents didn't ask the question out loud. They just looked it. They looked it hard to get at across, for right in the midst of an interpretation of recent events on the west front, the general stopped and smiled and said:

"Perhaps I'd better explain something about communications. For a long time there was a general impression that the German communications were more reliable than our own."

The correspondents couldn't help nodding assent to this. They knew what the general's editors have thought on the subject. The general smiled again and went on—

"Well, that impression was more or less correct."

The correspondents opened their several mouths and popped their several pairs of eyes. This was painful.

There's a general rule: The dispatches of a winning army commander are usually more to be relied upon than the dispatches of a losing commander. This is true even if they are equally honorable men.

"Suppose we lose a village in the midst of a hard day's fighting. Does the British officer directing the fight at that particular point immediately write the fact? No, he says, 'Well, we've got it now; but we'll get it back before the day's work is done.' There'll be time enough to report it then."

But a German commander, reporting a victory, shoots along the news to headquarters that he has captured that village. I know this to be true because it is exactly what the British officer would do if he were in the general's place.

Aid in the same way when the German officer loses a village he holds up the report—sometimes more than a day—in the hope of winning it back before reporting. There's a certain amount of human nature in the army, command only knows."

you'll observe. "So the communicate of the advancing army is the more reliable in that respect. Then there's the matter of prisoners taken. The advancing army sends its prisoners back of the lines to the detention cages as fast as they are taken and they are counted as fast as they reach the cages. The losing army commanded, driven out of his own ground, does not what proportion of his prisoners are taken in the field, taken prisoners or isolated for the time being."

"These two facts, taken together with the fact that a defeated army is always so disgraced that a winning army explains in large part why the communicate of the advancing army is likely to be the more accurate."

"The period in which the German communicate got its reputation for accuracy was the period when the German army was advancing on almost all fronts. That period is long past and the accuracy tables have been reversed."

"One correspondent suggested that the general rule described scarcely covered the recent wide disparity of German and British statements."

"No," said the general, "for the first time—and I think it is rather significant of the way the war is being fought—German headlines have been going back on plain lying. Their communications read more and more like fiction. They have one simple plan for most of them. They say, 'The British are doing this and that.' French armies a purpose, which isn't our purpose, and then show that we've failed to achieve it. British effort to break through our line at such-and-such a place failed. That's such-and-such a place failed. That's the fact. He says, 'Well, we've got it now; but we'll get it back before the day's work is done.' There'll be time enough to report it then."

CITIES AFFECTED BY NEW STATUTES RECENTLY ENACTED

Madison, Wis., July 6.—Scores of bills were acted upon at this session of the legislature affecting the cities of the state. The defeat of the home rule amendment and the constitution in the house, which would give the municipalities power to act on many of these measures of their own accord without coming to the legislature, is perhaps the most important. There were many bills affecting both Milwaukee and Superior, as the first and second class cities of the state. Among the more important laws enacted at this session affecting cities are:

Providing the public utilities may be leased by municipalities, subject to approval of railroad commission, the closing of the lease to be dependent upon approval of the electors of such municipality at an election.

Giving cities the right to lease, purchase or acquire by gift or devise, lands and buildings to be used for rest room purposes by the general public.

Giving cities the right to raise by direct taxation or by bond issue funds for buying lands, erection of buildings, equipment and management of art museums.

Changing law relating to issuance of bonds by cities. In case of bonds issued for street improvements, school purposes, waterworks, lighting works for streets and public buildings, hospital buildings, etc., during, river or other improvements, sewerage, parks and public grounds, a vote of the people shall not be required unless within thirty days after the passage by the common council of the ordinance authorizing the bonds there shall be filed in the office of the city clerk a petition in writing signed by no less than one-third of the voters of the city, and the bonds shall not be issued until the preceding general election, asking that the bonds be submitted to a vote of the people. Provided further that such election shall not be binding where bonds are to be used to replace or repair school buildings which have been condemned.

Making all members of the fire department, except the physician and surgeon, beneficiaries of the fire department pension fund.

Giving cities the right to organize the right to purchase, construct, lease or acquire any plant or equipment necessary for the purpose of securing, manufacturing or selling ice to citizens, subject to all constitutional provisions of existing laws. Providing further that any city however organized by a three-fourths vote of its common council may establish and operate depots or plants for the purchase, sale and supply of ice.

Providing that any money shall be paid to any contractor for any work any year assessable to abutting property unless the contract shall have been completed before the tenth day of November.

Giving cities the right to enact laws to punish violators of any city ordinance, providing penalty shall not exceed that imposed by the state for similar offenses.

Providing that 15 per cent of the voters represented in the vote cast for governor at a preceding election may request that a proposed ordinance or resolution be passed or adopted by the common council. Providing further that if the common council does not pass or adopt the ordinance or resolution it shall within thirty days submit the same to a vote of the people, and that if approved by the people it shall take effect on the day of its passage or within two years except by a vote of the people.

Adding the assistant secretary and operator of the United States land and police pension law in cities of the first class.

Authorizing cities to reimburse officials for expenses incurred in defending or maintaining their positions.

Giving tax commissioner the power to redistrict city in event of addition of territory through annexation to equalize assessment districts.

Extending police pensions power to cities of the fourth class.

Be Careful in Using Soap on Your Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.
The best thing to use is just plain mulberry coconut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very clean and keeps the scalp cool and moist. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.
Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

SILLYSONNETS

The Real Adventure

A NOVEL

By Henry Kitchell Webster

(Copyright 1916, The Hobbs-Merrill Company.)

But under the indomitable resolution of her blue eyes he turned away. This was the last appeal of that sort that he made.

"I'll promise," she said presently, "to be sensible—not to take any risks I don't have to take. I'll regard my life, and my health and all, as something I'm keeping in trust for you. I'll take plenty of warm, sensible clothes when I go; lots of shoes and stockings—things like that; and, if you'll let me—I'll borrow a hundred dollars to start myself off with. It isn't a tragedy, Roddy—not that part of it. You wouldn't be afraid for anyone else as big and strong and healthy as I."

Gradually, out of a welter of scenes like that, the thing got itself recognized as something that was to happen. But the parting came at last in a little different way from any they had foreseen.

Rodney came home from his office early one afternoon, with a telegram that summoned him to New York to a conference of counsel in a big public utility case he had been working on for months. He must leave, if he were going at all, at five o'clock. He ran sacking the house, vainly at first, for Rose, and found her at last in the trunk room—dusty, disheveled, sobbing quietly over something she hugged in her arms. But she dried her eyes and came over to him and asked him what it was that had brought him home so early.

He showed her the telegram. "I'll have to leave in an hour," he said. "If I'm to go."

She paled at that, and sat down rather giddily on the trunk. "You must go," she said, "of course. And—Roddy, I guess that'll be the easiest way. I'll get my telegram tonight—pretend to get it—from Portia. And you can give me the hundred dollars and then, when you come back, I'll be gone."

The thing she had been holding in her hands slipped to the floor. He stooped and picked it up—stared at it with a sort of half-wakened recognition.

"I found it," she explained, "among some old things Portia sent over when she moved. Do you know what it is? It's one of the notebooks that got wet that first night when we were put out of the street car. And—Roddy, look!"

She opened it to an almost blank page, and with a weak little laugh pointed to the thing that was written there: "March 15, 1912!"

"Your birthday, you see, and the day we met each other."

And then, down below, the only note she had made during the whole of that leave, he read: "Never marry a man with a passion for principles."

"She didn't particularly want to keep anybody out. But, in a sense in which it had never been quite true before, this was her room, a room where anyone lacking her specific invitation to enter would be an intruder—a condition which had not obtained either in her mother's house or in Rodney's."

She smiled widely over the absurdity of indulging in a pleasurable feeling of possession in a squalid little cubbyhole like this. The wall paper was stained and faded; there was an iron bed—the mattress on the bed was lumpy. There was a dingy-looking oak bureau with a small mirror; a marble-topped black walnut washstand and a pitcher standing in a bowl on top of it.

As for the hurrying life she looked out upon from her grimy window, the difference between it and that which she had been wont to contemplate through Florence McCrea's exquisitely leaded casements was simply planetary.

And yet, queerly enough, in terms of literal lineal measurement, the distance between the windows themselves was less than a thousand yards. And, such is the enormous social and spiritual distance between North Clark street and The Drive, she was as safely hidden here, as completely out of the orbit of any of her friends, or even of her friends' servants, as she could have been in New York or San Francisco.

Of course, wherever she went, whatever she did, there'd always be the risk that someone who could carry back news to Rodney's friends would recognize her. It was a risk that had to be taken. At the same time she'd protect the secret as well as she could.

There were two people, though, it couldn't be kept from—Portia and her mother. The story given out to Rodney's friends being that Rose was in California with her mother and Portia, left the chance always open for some contraband which would lead to her mother's discovering the truth in a surprising and shocking way.

But the truth itself, confidently stated, not as a tragic ending, but as the splendid, hopeful beginning of a life of true happiness for Rose and her husband, needn't be a shock. So this was what Rose had borne down upon her in her letter to Portia.

"I have found the big thing couldn't be had without a fight," she wrote. "You shouldn't be surprised, because you've probably found out for yourself that nothing worth having comes very easily. But you're not to worry about me, nor be afraid for me, because I'm going to win. I'm making the fight, somehow, for you as well as for myself. I want you to know that. I think that realizing I was living your life as well as mine, is what has given me the courage to start. I've got some plans, but I'm not going to tell you what they are. But I'll write to you every week and tell you what I've done, and I want you to write to Rodney. I want to be sure that you understand that Rodney isn't to blame for what's happened. We haven't quarreled, and I believe we're farther in love with each other than we've ever been before. I know I am with him. . . . Break this thing to mother as gently as you like, but tell her everything before you stop. . . ."

This letter written and dispatched, she had worked out the details of her departure with a good deal of care. In her own house, before the servants, she had tried to act just as she would have done had her pretended telegram really come from Portia. Her bag was packed, her trunk was gone, her motor waiting at the door to take her to the station, when the maid Doris brought the twins home from their airing. This wasn't chance, but prearrangement.

"Give them to me," Rose said, "and then you may go up and tell Mrs. Ruston they may have them in a few minutes."

She took them into her bedroom and laid them side by side on her bed. They had thriven finely—justified, so far as that went, Harriet's decision in favor of bottle feeding. Had she died back there in that bed of pain, never come out of the ether at all, they'd still be just like this—plump, placid, methodical. Rose had thought of that a hundred times, but it wasn't what she was thinking of now.

The thing that caught her as she was looking down on them, was a wave of sudden pity. She saw them suddenly as persons with the long road ahead of them, as a boy and a girl, a youth and a maid, a man and a woman.

"You've never had a mother at all, you poor little mites," she said. "But you're going to have one some day. You're going to be able to come to her with your troubles, because she'll have had troubles herself. She'll help you bear your hurts, because she's had hurts of her own. And she'll be able to teach you to stand the gaff, because she's stood it herself."

For the first time since they were born, she was thinking of their need of her rather than of her need of them, and with that thought came, for the first time, the surge of passionate maternal love that she had waited for so long in vain. There was, suddenly, an intolerable ache in her breast that could only have been satisfied by crushing them up against her breast; kissing their hands—their feet.

Rose stood there quivering, giddy with the force of it. "Oh, you darlings!" she said. "But wait—wait until I deserve it!" And, without touching them at all, she went to the door and opened it. Mrs. Ruston and Doris were both waiting in the hall.

"I must go now," she said. "Good-by. Keep them carefully for me." Her voice was steady and, though her eyes were bright, there was no trace of tears upon her cheeks. But there was a kind of glory shining in her face that was too much for Doris, who turned away and sobbed loudly. Even Mrs. Ruston's eyes were wet.

"Good-by," said Rose again, and went down composedly enough to her car.

She rode down to the station, shook hands with Otto, the chauffeur, allowed a porter to carry her bag into the waiting room. There she tipped the porter, picked up the bag herself, and walked out the other door; crossed over to Clark street and took a street car. At Chicago avenue she got off, and walked north, keeping her eyes open for placards advertising rooms to let. It was at the end of about half a mile that she found the hatched-faced landlady, paid her three dollars, and locked her door, as a symbol, perhaps, of the bigger, heavier door that she had locked upon her past life.

Strongest among all the welter of emotions boiling up within her, was a perfectly enormous relief. The thing which, when she had first faced it as the only thoroughfare to the real life she so passionately wanted, had seemed such a veritable nightmare, was an accomplished fact. The week of acute agony she had lived through while she was forcing her sudden resolution upon Rodney had been all but unendurable with the enforced contemplation of the moment of parting which they brought so relentlessly nearer. There had been a terror, too, lest when the moment actually came, she couldn't do it. Well, and now it had come and gone! The surgery of the thing was over.

Rose dusted the mirror with a towel—a reckless act, as she saw for herself, when she discovered she was going to have to use that towel for a week—and took an appraising look at herself. Then she nodded confidently; there was nothing the matter with her looks—and resumed her uister, her rubbers, and her umbrella, for it was the kind of December day which called for all three. Then, glowingly conscious that she was saving a nickel by so doing, she set off downtown afoot to get a job. She meant to get it that very afternoon. And, partly because she meant to so very definitely, she did.

Dinner Stories

Mother, nurse and baby were taking the air on the common. Mother was absorbed in a magazine, and when baby began to cry peevishly she said without looking up: "Give it to her, nurse." The crying went on and mother sat impatiently. "Oh, give her what she wants. I can't stand the noise. Suddenly the cries rose into a howl. The mother sat up and glared at the nurse. "Why don't you do as I tell you?" she inquired angrily. "Give it to her at once." "She's got it, mum," said the nurse quietly. "It's a wasp."

"Well, Rastus, I hear you are working again. What business are you engaged in?" "I've done been engaged in the mining business, sah."

"What kind of mining are you doing, gold silver or diamond?" "I'm doing kalsomining, sah."

Which costs most—painting or waiting?

After your house needs painting, every year you wait it will require more paint and more labor to put it in good condition. And every year you wait, your house is worth less. A little paint-money is good paint-insurance.

Just as soon as your house needs painting, come in and let us show you how little it will cost you to use DEVOE. We say "DEVOE" because it's absolutely pure. That's why DEVOE takes fewer gallons, wears longer—and costs less by the job by the year. And that's why we guarantee Devoe without reserve.

CARDS AT WATERTOWN MEET LEAGUE LEADERS

Janesville Team Clashes With Goings Sunday—Hard and Fast Game Easily Assured.

The Cardinals will be away from home Sunday, meeting the Goings at Watertown. The game promises to be a fast one and Watertown is reported to be taking no chances as they did two weeks ago when a late rally won that win from the Cards by a 2 to 1 score.

With the Janesville team further strengthened by a new second baseman and a shortstop, and in addition a group of new players to make the trip, the Cards will furnish even more opposition to the league leaders this week than they did two weeks ago.

Felix and Delaney have been picked for the mound work. Kelly, Knight and Korman at third, "Packer" Connell will play short and Cole, Meyers and Eberts will be in the field. Joe Ryan and a couple more new men will be ready to fill in as needed.

The team will leave here Sunday morning. A number of fans are planning to accompany the Cards and plans have been made by a number of car owners to carry more fans overland in their machines.

Tom Patterson, perseverance, and persistence will succeed on the turf as well as in any other walk of life was demonstrated at the Belmont Park track when Royalty, an old chestnut gelding, owned by Mrs. Paul Fox, was returned a victor.

MORRIS MILLER

John Rhodes of Greensburg, Ind., almost every year turns up with a sensation winner on the bull-race track. His summer racing horses and gets a lot of fun and money out of it. First he "made" and sold the trotter, John Thomas 2:15, a white gelding that won a long string of events for Rhodes before he cashed the trotter for a large sum.

Then it was Goldie G. a pacer he sold to Columbus O. but who turned over to Charley Valentine, who raced her with great success and gave her a record of 2:02.4. Now Rhodes has a pacer he calls "Little Jackson" that gave the Indianapolis railbirds a shock by stepping a mile in 2:08, without having any advance notices sent out. Now the name railbirds think Rhodes is ready with another sensational pacer.

The Detroit club announces the purchase of First Baseman Lew Bille from the Martinsburg club of the Blue Ridge league. Scout Joe Sussman says he is a bear cat. Hugh Jennings wants him to report at once, but the Martinsburg club says it needs him for a while in its own business.

A Cleveland critic complains that Lee Fohl has loaded himself down with too many outfielders who hit from the left side. He says the manager of the Indians to get a good right-handed hitter from somewhere. Urging is easy. Landing the man is another thing. Roth is the Indians' outfielder who hits from the right side.

Bob Veach of the Tigers wants to know if hitting a ball over the fence is actually hitting the sign. In one of the games Detroit played in Washington Veach sent the ball clear over the sign for one of the longest drives ever seen in Washington. It is some trick to hit to the sign there, let alone clear it.

Mike Menosky, the Washington outfielder, has applied for admission to the officers' reserve corps, but his age, twenty-two may keep him out, as the government has stated it wants older men for officers. Mike is still quite eligible as a private, but who wants to be a private?

Old Doc Crandall ran his string of straight victories for Lee Anglin up to seven before Portland made him take the count. In his run of seven he pitched a stretch of thirty-eight innings without a run being scored on him. Talk about Dixie being the land for ball players to come back in. What's the matter with the coast territory?

The Cantillon brothers, Mike and Joe of the Minneapolis club, together with another brother not in baseball and a sister, are heirs to the estate of Patrick Cantillon, a California pioneer who died in Sacramento recently. Mike Cantillon has been made executor of the estate, which is said to amount to a quarter of a million dollars.

Injuries are not the only thing handicapping the Browns. Several of the players have the war fever so strong they can't keep their minds on the game. Shortstop John Lavin is one. He is eager to join the army medical service and can hardly wait until the baseball season closes in fact, it would not surprise any one if he quit the game before the end of the season. Catcher Hank Severed, who has two brothers in the military service, also talks of giving up baseball for war, while Outfielder Bill Rumber is pretty certain to join the army before he will accept a minor league berth. Another would-be soldier is Ted Sloan, substitute infielder, and he and Rumber plan to enlist together.

Harry Davis is a forty-four year old, but Connie Mack is going to use him as a pinch hitter, especially when the opposing pitcher is a left-hander. He all but broke the record for a pinch hitter in the thirteenth inning when he batted for Bill Johnson. Mack made a wonderful stop, and there was a double play. There never was anything wrong with Harry's batting eye. His legs slowed up, and that caused him to quit as a regular. But he can still judge pitching and undoubtedly will make his presence felt in pinch roles this season.

Royalty is a well-bred horse, being son of Duke of Ormonde and Retelling. James Johnson over the quickie stable, bought him as a yearling and thought so highly of him that he predicted the horse would win fame on the turf. Royalty broke down. He bowed a tendon and was sent to the field. So severe was the injury that Mr. Johnson gave up hope of mending him and presented him to Paul Fox, the veteran trainer.

Bill Burns is one player who wouldn't take a salary cut. The veteran southpaw resigned from the Oakland team to go to New Mexico, where he has a job as boss in a mine at $7 a day and a chance to play ball on the side for a few additional simoleons. Burns doesn't have to work for a living, but the baseball on the side idea appealed to him.

The American javelin record of 194 feet 11 inches, made by Higgins of Chicago at the conference championships will not be accepted by the A.A.U. Charles A. Fox, chairman of the conference championship committee, gave the details of the throw in a letter to F. W. Rubien, secretary treasurer of the A.A.U. Fox said the throw was not "recommended" the throw as a record. Athletic sharpshooters believe that Higgins has it in him to even better the record. He is a hard thrower. Some expect him to put the figure up to 230 feet.

The University of Pennsylvania has made military training a prerequisite to participation in competitive sport. With this safeguard of preparation for young men who later may be called to the colors, it is the intention of the university authorities to conduct "sport as usual," so far as may be possible under the changed conditions brought about by the war and the enlistment of a majority of the star athletes.

Fletcher Locks is the best shortstop in the National league, not excepting Maranville or Baneroff. The Braves have tried more minor league players than any other team in last campaign.

Hank Gowdy, who has joined his regiment, will not be replaced by Scallion in a hurry. The Braves must get another catcher to help out Truesdale.

Ty Cobb is hitting the ball so hard this year that all the enemy pitchers are afraid of him.

Herzog is the King of Second basemen. Since joining the Giants he has played the game of his life.

Fox took the gift horse and presented him to his wife. "Here's a good horse that needs a little tenderness," he told Mrs. Fox. "Mrs. Fox is crippled now, but I can mend him for you and win some races."

LANDIS SENDS 81 SLACKERS TO JAIL

Freeport, July 6.—Eighty-one slackers arrested July 6 after registration day in Rockford, were given sentences yesterday by Federal Judge Landis. Seventy-eight were given a year and a day in the house of correction in Chicago, while three were given shorter jail sentences. The court specified hard labor in each case.

Many of the culprits declared they would not register even if given an opportunity, affirming opposition to war as their reason. All those sentenced will be required to register.

Theodore Apfel of Chicago, was arrested on a charge of sending treasonable matter through the mails, in connection with a similar case against Andrew Sisson, arrested three days ago.

Demurrers to the indictments against Gustave H. Jacobsen, Albert H. Welde and Byron Kurt von Rohwitz, indicted in connection with an alleged conspiracy to foment a revolution in India.

William Fine, arrested several days ago on a charge that he had maltreated the president, upon being liberated by the federal authorities, was taken by the police and fined $100 and costs in municipal court on a charge of disorderly conduct. Fine is a brother of an assistant professor at the University of Chicago.

MYSTICAL NUMBERS CAUSE OF TROUBLE TO MANY A YOUTH

Some Joker Started Rumor That First Numbers in Draft For Army Had Been Drawn.

Searched in the minds of many a youth who carries his registration ticket in his pocket showing he is subject to the selective draft, will be the mystical numbers, Five, Nine, Eleven, Seventeen, Sixty-One, Sixty-Two, Sixty-Seven, Ninety-Seven, One Hundred, One Hundred and Seven, One Hundred and Eleven, One Hundred and Nineteen, One Hundred and Forty-Five, One Hundred and Forty-Six, Six, and One Hundred and Twenty-Five, for some would-be practical joker down in Peru, Indiana, started the rumor over the telephone wires that these were the numbers drawn in Washington for the first selective draft.

The baseless rumor, believed to have been started by a practical joker, that numbers have been drawn for the national army draft, yesterday sent thousands of young men scurrying for information.

Throughout the day the Gazette office, federal officials, the county clerk's office, members of draft exemption boards were deluged with inquiries as to the authenticity of the report.

For the information of all it can be stated authoritatively that the rumor is without foundation. In fact the earliest possible time at which the draft lottery can begin will be Monday.

Lists Not Even Compiled. In branding the report as a canard, it is pointed out that the numbers for each exemption district have not even been compiled and the government has no means for drawing numbers as yet.

The precinct numbers, as indicated on the cards given to each registrant, have been abolished, and those who registered will be numbered serially by district.

"I understand the rumor originated in Peru, Ind., where numbers said to be drawn in the draft were posted on a public score board," said a government official.

"Before drawings can be made, complete lists of men registered in each district must be in the hands of state authorities and officials in Washington. The government has set July 7 as the date for completing the organization of exemption boards, but the lists will not be organized by that time."

Offer Theory of Rumor. Officials at Washington believed the report that selections had been made arose from the fact that many boards have begun to publish their registration cards and in some cases are publishing the lists, as required by the regulations. Provost Marshal General Crowder said the number of boards are completed and have numbered more than 9,600,000 cards the drawings can be made. It is said the method of drawing will be practically complete and will be explained in a few days in another set of regulations.

Members of the exemption boards in the forty-four districts in Chicago had failed to present credentials of organization and call for supplies in the election commissioners' office for the past several days. The board will call for supplies today. The only board of the nine in Cook county outside of Chicago, which has been called for, is in the office of County Clerk Robert M. Switzer is that in the Cicero-Lyons district.

Report Wholly Untrue. The fact remains, however, that the report that selections had been made was wholly untrue, and further, more was entirely absurd. Here is the actual process by which men will be drafted into the new national army.

The registration board will give each man a serial number, which will be entirely distinct from the number inscribed on the registration cards. When this is done, the list of serial numbers to Washington and to Madison, and at the same time post each registered man's name with the serial number he will bear. A drawing, similar to a lottery drawing, will be made in Washington, and the numbers which are thus brought out will be sent back to the point of origin, in this case Milwaukee. Then each man can see if his serial number has been drawn, and if such is the case he must appear before an exemption board. If his number does not appear on the list sent from Washington, he has not been chosen for the draft.

Exactly how and when the story originated is not known. The report reached the Gazette early Thursday afternoon and after an exhaustive investigation, it was learned the report had been received by railroad. Additional information was given in the same rumor was current in Chicago, and that city also was in a state of high excitement as a result.

WOMEN SHAKE HANDS AND PROMISE TO END DISTURBING FOXHALL

Mrs. Eugene Wall and Mrs. Lila Miller, Fourth Ward residents, shook hands in municipal court yesterday afternoon and promised Judge H. L. Maxfield to "call it off." Mrs. Wall was up on a complaint of assault and battery, which was made by Mrs. Miller. The latter showed bumps on her head and said they arose from a room in the hands of Mrs. Wall. Chickens rooting up the garden started it all. Mrs. Wall pleaded guilty and the case was adjourned for a week.

OPERATIC AMBITION OF U. S. ARMY MULES CHECKED BY FRENCH

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] With the French Army Afield, July 6.—Uncle Sam rendered France a great service in letting her have his mules—at a very good price—but France has returned the service a thousand times by solving the secret of a brayless mule.

When the American pack mule arrived in France to "do his bit" he of course brought his bray with him. The mule was welcome but the bray—well any unusual sound on a battle field is undesirable. It might tip off the Boche to a surprise attack.

In an effort to put an end to the nightly "love song" of the pack mule the French military officers decided to separate the sexes, and all gentlemen mules were retained for service in one sector while all of the lady mules were taken off for service in a more distant region.

This produced very marked results. Nevertheless there still remained certain mules who either from force of habit or from conviction that both their love and their voice were strong that their lady loves would never leave them no matter how far away they might be, persisted in making one welkin ring with a gigantic bray just at the place and time when would give the "Boches" the right cue for sending in a hail of shells, grenades and rifle fire.

The habits and temperament of the mule were then subjected to further and more profound study by the French and this time with more happy results. It was found that a very light operation, performed on the nostrils of a mule would render him as silent as a wrecked phonograph, and since then the American mules in the Vosges have met all requirements that could possibly be exacted from them.

BADGER-MINNESOTA LINE DISPUTE CASE DATE SET FOR JULY SEVENTEENTH

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., July 6.—Testimony will be taken on July 17 at Duineth regarding the suits started by the state of Minnesota in the United States supreme court over the Wisconsin-Minnesota boundary line. The question at issue is whether St. Louis Bay and the Bay of Superior are a part of the St. Louis river. If a part of the river the boundary line would be the center of the bay. If a part of the river the boundary line will follow the thread of the stream. On this decision will depend whether further and more docks are taxable in Wisconsin or Minnesota. D. E. Roberts of Superior, has been appointed special referee to take the testimony. Attorney General Owen will probably conduct the case for the state of Wisconsin.
